

Focus Area	Strength	Points to Improve	My Promise to Improve
VISUAL	Since I am used to standing on the field and keeping my head up, my physical presence mostly looks like I am a confident player and professional on camera.	There are times where I stare at the camera lens more intensely without having to blink much and I also realized that I do not use any natural hand gestures which makes me look stiff.	I promise that I will treat the camera like a teammate in games where I would let myself be natural in front of it and let myself blink, smile naturally and use casual hand gestures in explaining my experience or my message instead of just freezing.
VERBAL	I introduced myself, my program and my sport directly without having to rumble my words or get off track this makes my point easier to follow.	Due to the lack of information about myself, I didn't have too many stories or give much details in order to show my personality and make my life story stick to people, being direct may overwhelm and shock people.	Next time, I will include a specific, engaging detail like why I chose my major or a quick story about balancing sports and school to give the audience a better sense of who I am.
VOCAL	I mostly spoke up in a clearer way so the audio and the people would hear and understand me easier and that my natural voice level would carry throughout the process of me recording.	I spoke too fast since sometimes I want to get my video done, where it leads me to sounding more on a monotone side like I am just sharing some facts rather than talking to someone naturally.	I will control my speaking pace that same way that I would control my breathing before and while recording. I'll also intentionally try to slow down whenever I feel like I am speaking in a hurry, I would also promise to take a pause between different ideas and let my energy flow naturally.